About

Hello! My name is David Failor. I am an avid pupil of information technology, people, and life in general. I often ponder the purpose and meaning of life, as well as my place in the universe. To that end I try and use my information technology skills to the best of my ability to help others and do my part to contribute to a better world for everyone.